

First Year First Term Survey – Three Year Results Summary (2009-2011)

Overview

First year students were surveyed during their first fall semester for the third year in Fall of 2011. Typically, students are surveyed around the beginning of October, and the survey is available for approximately two weeks. The 2011 survey was made available at a slightly later date (October 5th) and was available for a slightly longer time period (just over three weeks) than in the two previous years. The most recent survey saw an increase in the number of respondents (1,511), and in the response rate (to 32.4%). This continues the trend from the previous two years.

In general, the respondents, and their responses, have remained consistent over the three years of the survey. More female than male students return the survey and they are overrepresented among respondents compared to the campus population as a whole. The distribution of respondents among the different colleges has remained fairly steady over the three years, with no major dips or spikes. One area of change is in the racial/ethnic breakdown – the percentage of respondents who self-reported as Hispanic/Latino dropped to 1.8% (from 4.5% and 3.7% the two previous years). There were also far fewer respondents with an unknown race/ethnicity (2.2% compared to 6.8% for both of the previous years). Both of these changes may be due to the inclusion of a new category, multiple races that captured 6.2% of respondents. It is possible that students who would have previously only chosen Hispanic/Latino, or who would have not selected any category, may have chosen multiple races this year.

Included with this summary is a three year overview report that includes information about the survey respondents, and their actions and attitudes in several areas. Notable exceptions will be discussed below, but overall, the survey appears to provide a consistent window into the experiences of first year first term students here at NC State.

Significant Changes in Responses:

- Missing Class – More students indicated that they had skipped classes in 2011 than in previous years. 28.4% of respondents said they had skipped two to three classes (compared to 21.3% and 23.0% in the two previous years), and 18.4% of students said they had skipped four or more classes (compared to 9.9% in each of the previous two years).
- Sense of Belonging and Community – 47.3% of students in the 2011 survey said that a sense of belonging or community at NC State was very important (compared to 60.8% and 56.7% in the previous two years). Correspondingly, more 2011 respondents said that it was slightly important (12.8% compared to 6.2% and 8.7%) or moderately important (37.5% compared to 31.0% and 32.8%). That might be reflected in the extent to which the 2011 first year students feel a sense of belonging at NC State. When asked about the extent to which they experienced a sense of belonging/community here, fewer 2011 respondents answered a great deal (31.9% compared to 41.6% and 34.9% in the two previous years). The number who answered some stayed essentially the same as previous years, but more 2011 students answered not at all or a little.

This was the first year the survey posed a set of sub-questions for first year students related to their sense of belonging/community. The vast majority of first year students this year said it was moderately or very important to have a sense of belonging/community in small groups (93.9%) and that they experienced a sense of belonging/community some or a great deal in small groups (87.7%) at NC State. The equivalent responses asking about their sense of belonging/community in formal organizations was still positive, but less so (79.3% said it was moderately or very important; 72.6% said that they experienced it some or a great deal).

- Confidence – Students were asked about their confidence in their ability in several areas, and there were a few notable changes.
 - More first year students were confident in their ability to find their way around campus (70.5% said they were very confident in 2011 compared to 60.3% and 60.6% in the previous two years).
 - A slightly larger percentage of students in 2011 had less confidence in their ability to relieve or reduce homesickness compared to the previous two years (9% said they were not at all confident or not very confident in 2011 compared to 6.6% in both of the previous two years)
 - More first year students in 2011 were not very confident in their ability to effectively manage their time (16.3% compared to 12.3% and 13.2% in previous years) with a corresponding drop in the percentage who said they were very confident (27.0% compared to 32.5% and 34.4%).
 - More students were very confident that they could identify at least one campus resource for academic support (56.5% compared to 50.5% and 51.2% in previous years) and that they could identify a group on campus that supports an identity important to them (51.6% compared to 46.6% and 44.5%).
- Feelings – First year students in 2011 were more likely to feel lonely sometimes (27.5% compared to 22.0% and 23.2%), more likely to feel overwhelmed often/constantly (33.2% compared to 24.4% and 25.4%), significantly more likely to often/constantly feel concerned about financial issues (31.3% compared to 19.4% and 19.2% in previous years), and more likely to often/constantly feel academically underprepared (16.5% compared to 11.9% and 13.8%).

However, this did not make them question their fit at NC State since the percentage of 2011 first year students who said that they often/constantly felt NC State was not a good fit only increased a little from 2010 and was actually lower than 2009 (7.5% in 2011, 6.9% in 2010, and 9.3% in 2009).

- Actions to Engage With NC State – Students were asked about several areas where they could engage with individuals on campus, and by and large, the 2011 first year students had an across-the-board increase. Higher percentages of students in 2011 answered a great deal when asked to what extent they had used an upper-class student, gotten involved in campus activities, developed a relationship with a faculty member, developed a relationship with a staff member, or sought out academic assistance for help with schoolwork.

Dates: October 1st through October 19th

Population: 4,778 New Freshmen

Return Rate: 25.4% (1214)

2010

Dates: September 29th through October 9th

Population: 4,703 New Freshmen

Return Rate: 30.8% (1447)

Respondents: Women are overrepresented among survey respondents. Students in the College of Agriculture & Life Sciences are slightly overrepresented, while those in the Ag Institute and Engineering are slightly underrepresented among survey respondents.

2011

Dates: October 5th through October 28th

Population: 4,661 New Freshman

Return Rate: 32.4% (1511)

Respondents: Women are overrepresented among survey participants. Students in the College of Agriculture & Life Sciences are slightly overrepresented and students in the Ag Institute and DUAP are slightly underrepresented in the sample.
